

As part of the Montgomery Gateway Tree Planting project, Mike Dincher, an assistant professor in the School of Natural Resources Management at Pennsylvania College of Technology, and several college students recently planted several shade trees in the borough. The project is funded through the Susquehanna Greenway Partnership and includes partnerships between the borough, local businesses and volunteers. Penn College, the Black Hole Creek Watershed Association, the state Department of Conservation and Natural Resources' Bureau of Forestry and SEDA-Council of Governments all will be involved in a larger tree planting planned for March 2013. The trees will be grouped and in corridors that will provide gateways into the community.

PHOTOS PROVIDED